Prospective candidates should submit their application together with a cover letter, curriculum vita, application form and a two to three-page research proposal detailing the project’s coverage and methodology which are to be attached with the online form.

All applications must be sent by 13 March 2020.

Role Purpose

The South East Asian Central Banks (SEACEN) Research and Training Centre will be undertaking one collaborative research project between participating economists of member central banks/monetary authorities and a visiting research economist (VRE) this year. The SEACEN Centre is therefore seeking research proposals on either one of the following two research themes that have been identified for 2020:

1. The transmission of macroprudential policy in SEACEN member economies
2. Technological advances and monetary/financial stability in SEACEN member economies

Selection Criteria

One research proposal belonging to either topic (1) or topic (2) will be chosen based on (in no particular order):

- its individual merit;
- its feasibility considering available data and resources in SEACEN member economies;
- its applicability to SEACEN member central banks/monetary authorities; and
- its benefit to SEACEN member central banks/monetary authorities.

The best research project chosen by The SEACEN Centre will then be pursued under the supervision of the VRE that has submitted the winning entry. Based upon the chosen research project, The SEACEN Centre will invite staff of member central banks/monetary authorities to participate in the chosen research projects.

The VRE will take the role of a project leader and provide guidance to Project Team Members (PTMs) from SEACEN member central banks/monetary authorities in implementing the chosen research project.
